

Conference of the Board of Freeholders Over County Expenses for the Ensuing Year

It cost $17,500 for expenses at

Commissioners Take Testimony

100

It
and the
of
ear
was
of
hat
ch
ver
by the
or's
log

CHANGES ADVOCATED.

Reverend Mr. March, who was warmly received when introduced to speak of "Civics in Relation to the Education of the Citizen," said:

When I look at the total amount and devotion to the dream to making the thing so that the some the balance very happy.

How long are we going to hold our liberties unless we fight against the invasion of these great organizations pouring them to base and end," continued Mr. Woodbury. "When our valuable heritage of freedom is jeopardized where are our men? The only form of patriotism is not military success, but the every-day discharge of one's duty as a citizen. We must organize if we are going to do what all citizens to be the highest duty. Let the churches, the Y. M. C. A., the labor unions, the Farmers' Union, and other groups and organizations organize and make that organization a means to an end, the highest good to the greatest number."

Made by the Finance Committee and Other Members of the Town Council Councilmen Pleased with the Condition and Conducting of the Schools

Some of the Councilmen while of the opinion that in the enforcement of a ultra strict economy some reductions might be made in the cost of the kindergarten and High School departments, but the result would be to impair the present efficiency of both those departments, and the probability is that public sentiment would not be in accord with such a step.

The inspection made on Thursday is of practical benefit to the taxpayers of the town. It was made by men who are practical business men who were thoroughly representative of the great majority of taxpayers in this town, and who were on the lookout for any possible extravagances in school methods, and who stood ready to chop off any needless frills that might be detected. They did not hesitate to ask straight, forward, blunt questions as to the cost of maintenance of each department of the schools.

That the result of their work was satisfactory to them as taxpayers, and as trustees of the public interests gives particular value to their findings